From the Minister's Desk

Teachers Are Important People

A large school system hired several cannibals.

"You are all part of our team now," said the school district's human resources manager during the welcome briefing.

"You get all the usual benefits, and you have an excellent retirement plan. You can go to one of the school cafeterias for something to eat, but please don't eat any of the other employees."

The cannibals promised they would not.

A few weeks later the cannibals' supervisor remarked, "You're all working very hard, and I'm satisfied with you. However, one of our teachers has disappeared. Do any of you know what happened to her?"

The cannibals all shook their heads, "No," they said.

After the supervisor left, the leader of the cannibals said to the others angrily, "Right, which one of you idiots ate the teacher?"

A hand rose hesitantly in admission. "You fool!" said the leader, "For weeks we've been eating administrators and no one noticed anything, but nooo, you had to go and eat someone important!"

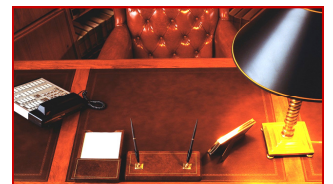

Teachers are important in school systems, and they are certainly critical to the Hillcrest Church of Christ. That's why this weekend we are going to be honoring them for their outstanding service to the church at the annual teacher appreciation banquet. I urge all teachers to attend this important event for some really important people!

Thank you Olivia McGrady for inspiring alma mater Sunday and to you Hillcrest for your participation, especially for inviting family, colleagues, and friends. I'm thinking now about bringing soup on Super Bowl Sunday where you can display your favorite sports team while stocking the pantry with soup. If you have any other ideas and suggestions, let me know.

I am in Raleigh, North Carolina this week, having keynoted the North Carolina State Lectureship and doing a revival/homecoming for the South Central Church of Christ in Raleigh where Mike Dublin is the minister. I know that you will encourage David Giddens as he preaches here today.

Finally, Quinton (aka Q) Ludy is doing an excellent job on Wednesday night surveying the book of 1 Corinthians. Q is well prepared and the class is both exciting and informational. Why don't you join us?

Richard L. Barclay, Minister
