From the Minister's Desk

Passivity

On May 27, 1998, Michael Fortier was sentenced to twelve years in prison for being passive. Fortier was the key witness whose testimony helped convict Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols in the Oklahoma City bombing. Fortier knew about the extensive plans of his two former Army buddies, but he failed to warn the authorities.

In a courtroom adjacent to where the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building once stood, Fortier begged for the forgiveness of those who had lost loved ones. You will recall that this horrific episode of American terrorism claimed 168 lives, including nineteen children, and five hundred others were injured on that morning of April 19, 1995.

Upon reflection, Fortier said, "I thought his (McVeigh) plan would never bear fruit. I was terribly wrong." He went on to describe his desire for things to be different: "I sometimes daydream that I told the police and I became a hero. But in reality I'm not."

The courtroom's judgment on Fortier's passivity should speak to our tendencies toward spiritual passivity. Jesus condemned the servant who passively buried his talent. Spiritual passivity denies the importance and urgency of man's greatest need—salvation through Jesus Christ.

Michael Fortier failed to speak up and thousands of lives were shattered. If Christians remain silent, far greater destruction will occur, and our passivity will not go unpunished. We can speak up and become a hero, or face the consequences of opting for silence.
